

Editor's Ramblings, part 2.

Following on from the last, another point often made is :
Shere has 7 councillors, that's too many, it's unfair, they have too much influence and power, while Peaslake only 4, and Holmbury only 3 .

While that much is true in broad terms, Shere is, as a whole, bigger. But it's 2 villages, not one. This proportion reflects the scale of each ward, of which there are only 3.

Remember the post from yesterday: Shere is in fact 2 villages, not one.

Seen through that lense, all becomes clear, and obvious. Maybe a good enough reason enough to persuade doubting residents to stay 'in' ?
